Chapter 1 by Story Wars

Yes I am Story Wars, and your invited to add too me. Yes you read correctly your invited to add too me, and in return you will receive points, that can be conveniently located at that top right of you web browser. Admittedly your cant redeem these points for gifts, but they do allow you to exhibit some literary credibility to other members, and you also have the added benefit of a feel good factor of making a collaborative input for a seminal piece of work!

Write me....

Chapter 2 by Adam Muller

Or I will write you, type you all over this world, make you do this, go there, do that. If you don't choose me first, your ribcage will absorb the clicks and clacks of a keyboard.

Write me! Or I will write you!

You will not like it if I do. You will never feel home again. Only the whirl of the hard-drive day. You will feel air spinning beneath your chest unable to get out. Write me! Do it now! RIGHT ME!

I have written cannot be

So I must settle for writing you.

The story wars paradox can now only continue stretching out into infinity, or 8 chapters, close enough.

What of the un-chosen drafts, the written unwritten story of the story wars paradox on story wars, the elaborate fiction created and then at once destroyed?

For what is a story if no one is there to read it, or shall I dare say, vote on it?

For it votes that I thrive upon, chapters are only a cruel means to an end.

So you may write me, but really I subsist only on the votes of others to grow.

And a minimum of 2 drafts, of course.

Chapter 5 by intellikat

These things always die at Chapter 4 or 5...

Chapter 6 by intellikat

And yet, I return TRIUMPHANT!

In chapter 6 there is always a great turn in the story! A last gasp before the inevitable end. Story Wars coughs up one last attempt at redeeming a through line after weeks of dormancy. And so... I SHALL RISE AGAIN! The final two chapters will shine through the rust and cobwebs of a comatose cobbling of drafts and bring you to your feet, applauding!
